of Ashland Are Indignant Over Recent Action of Council.

ASHLAND, VA., July 31.—Although the action of the Town Council in passing ordinances last week giving the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad the right to widen their tracks two feet in Railroad avenue and the Western Union Telegraph Company the right to put up poles between the same, the work has not been started by either right to put up poles between the same, the work has not been started by either company. Several citizens living on this street have said they expect to make gomebody pay them damages for every inch of this thoroughfare taken by the railroad company in throwing their tracks nearer the sidewalk.

They contend that the town council has no right to grant any use of this street for any other purposes whatsoever than as a street and when other uses were made of it, it ceased to belong to the town and reverted to the abutting property owners.

When asked if they expected to get out

When asked if they expected to get out an injunction to stop the widening of the tracks a most emphatic "no" was given, as this, they said, would be fighting for the town and in their claim for property damage the town as well as the railroad would be involved.

One of them is of the opinion that every member of the council who voted for the ordinances has made himself personally liable and when damage suits are brought they will include all parties concerned. It could not be learned whather Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac had formally accepted the ordinances, but a check for $1,000 has been given the town by those who conducted the negotiations and the passing of the ordinances.

The railroad company, has recently graded and ballasted the street which, it is stated, has improved its looks and ndded to the value of the property along same, and many think the antagonistic spirit shown against the recent action of the council to be narrow and unbusinessilke and one calculated to hurt
